

Dbz pokemon story idea

A kid who looks like kid goten who I'll be calling goten would be a child who wanted to become a super hero one day

He had his own costume pretending to save civilians

He didn't really have parents and he lived outside but whatever he'd find in the dumpsters he'd use them to either survive or let him travel back into his fantasies

One night when he was pretending to be spider man he'd hear a noise of a car getting closer

He'd turn around but couldn't see the people in the car because the light was too bright

Something red passed next to his face and when he turned around he got knocked out

He'd wake up in a yellow tube

Scientists outside would panic and turn on something they weren't planning to do so soon

They surrounded the tube with a screen that would show a video of said scientists getting brutally killed to piss him off and unravel his power

Since he woke up earlier than he was supposed to he'd get pissed off and break out of the tube, when he'd get electric shocks from the metal tubes that were attached to his body they would spike his hair up, bulk him up and make himself look way older

They were supposed to weaken him but he was able to absorb it

Because again they didn't take enough time to do what was supposed to be done to make the experiment work but they didn't want to pass on the opportunity to make a human electric Pokémon hybrid

His rage would be his transformation, a different state and a different person, when he's calm he's positive and wants to be good, when he's angry he's serious and only thinks about slaughtering whoever dared to hurt him

Every time he'd either be knocked out or blinded by his rage personality it would look like he was cutting from one scene to another in a movie instantaneously

This time he woke up outside, gasping for breath

Then he'd feel a shock wave and hear an explosion

He'd turn around and see the lab was burning down

He would run to the lab thinking he could save someone but too scared to get in the fire

People were screaming for help

One by one their voices quieting down

He shouted to himself to do it, to run in to do something but he couldn't

So he ran away from the burning building

A day later

It was raining

On Tv news people were talking about an accident that happened in a discovered lab

He saw the corpses of the people who's screams he heard that night

The second he saw it he looked away and took off

He went to a forest to stay away from the city because there people's voices could be heard, screens could be seen and both reminded him of that night

Once he saw a gardevoir fighting against machamp and a kid behind machamp screaming at him

He was reminded of the screams, gardevoir was bleeding, she was shaking

Machamp was about to strike and then

Goten thought he teleported again... he was scared to look back again

But he didn't even need to

He looked down at his hands and he saw eyes and liquid coming out of it, blue flesh and teeth drenched into them all

He turned around

Gardevoir was alone

No kid in sight

Just a body of the Machamp which had a tree branch through its torso

If he didn't look at Machamp that long he wouldn't have noticed a ripped apart jacket of the trainer and his hat right next to the body and a severed human hand popping out from where Machamp's head was supposed to be

He'd always be scared to help anybody, he would stay away from any of them because he was afraid of himself

He didn't think he'd be able to use his powers with his control instead of having his anger self take over

Gardevoir would be his first friend

He would have an ability to generate yellow electricity and when he'd get angry he'd be able to control blue electricity, when he's angry he gets a super saiyan hair gets more muscular and grows up as if he was exactly like adult Goku when he fought Freiza on Namek

He'd also be able to generate plasma balls and plasma strings, he'd be able to catch said balls with his strings, keep the balls floating in one place and swing off of them with the strings like spider man

Those strings would also be stretchy so he'd be able to use the ball and the string like a Flail

Or he'd attach the string on his opponent move backwards and jump to move towards them quickly

I'm not going to continue it because honestly I don't know pokemon well enough this was just a fun idea for a story I got and wanted to write it down